Music is everywhere these days, thanks to its digital portability and instant availability on iPods, smartphones and other devices the world over. But the tiny speakers aboard these devices aren't exactly suited to rocking out loud. That's why the portable speaker market has boomed (pun intended) the past several years, with wireless Bluetooth connectivity one of the main features of these small-but-mighty sound boxes. I've reviewed a few different speakers on behalf of The Gadgeteer, the latest one being the Inateck MercuryBox seen here. With a compact form factor and a handsome matte silver and black design, it adds one feature that many of the others lack—water resistance. Let's take a look. Gadget on!
